

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

People around the globe are now more aware about the impact of global warming to the environment. Never before the awareness reached this high. Governments are amending their regulations to stricter ones and corporations are competing to find "green" ways of doing business. One of the promising "green" business is waste watermanagement service.

Looking at this opportunity, our company decided to enter the market by providing solution for customers to manage their waste waters. The market is still extremely huge, triggered by increasing awareness of environmental sustainability and forced by strict government regulations.

We differentiate our service by not only providing waste water management, but also by recycling the water being managed into clean water with high quality standard. Our initial target markets will be apartments, hotels, department stores and malls. Depending on the technological advancement and other external factors, there is a possibility that we will serve different markets in the future.

In delivering our service to customers, we have acquired proven technology from LIPI and possessed highly experienced team to support it. We strongly believe that this business will not only be profitable, but also give high return to the shareholders.
